Leonard, Street and Deinard's mission is to understand your business, stay focused on your goals, and provide you with wise counsel and practical advice. This mission is supported by our innovative Client Advisory Council which keeps us in close touch with our clients' expectations in the rapidly changing business world. Similarly, our unique Client Covenant is a pledge to provide the highest standards of service in a cost-effective manner.

The firm's securities and strategic growth practice group provides a full range of services to start-up and mid-sized public companies. Our attorneys regularly serve as outside general counsel, representing clients in all areas of their businesses, from the establishment of the enterprise through its evolution, including financing, operations, growth and exit strategies. We regularly provide advice and counsel in connection with general business matters, benefits planning, financing, merger and acquisition transactions, employment and OSHA issues, intellectual property protection and dispute resolution. We strive to serve as an integral part of client organizations, fully acquainted with their businesses and objectives.

Stephen Quinlivan practices primarily in the areas of mergers and acquisitions, securities, and international transactions. His experience includes numerous cross border transactions, assets purchases, public and private mergers and all types of offerings, including private placements, IPOs, high yield offerings, investment grade debt, securitizations, and international offerings by foreign private issuers.

Mark Weitz focuses his practice on general corporate law, finance and securities law, and mergers and acquisitions. He represents clients in activities such as acquisitions or dispositions of business units, mergers, joint ventures, licensing arrangements, financing transactions, and private and public offerings.

Thomas Sanders is chair of our corporate law department. Tom has substantial experience in a broad range of corporate and transactional legal matters, including mergers and acquisitions; shareholder relationships and disputes; private debt and equity financings; and organizational formation and governance issues.

Al Woodward has represented a broad range of clients on corporate and business issues with an emphasis on corporate finance, securities laws, and mergers and acquisitions for 40 years.

Eric Skytte focuses his practice on general corporate law, mergers and acquisitions, and finance and securities law. Eric has experience in counseling clients in all aspects of corporate formation, financing transactions, mergers, joint ventures, licensing and other complex transactions.

Tom Jensen has substantial experience in a broad range of transactional business law matters, with a special emphasis on providing strategic counsel to companies in the energy, consulting and financial services sectors. Tom regularly represents buyers and sellers in merger and acquisition transactions, issuers and investors in private securities offerings, and borrowers and lenders in secured and unsecured financings.

Jill Radloff focuses her practice in the areas of corporate and securities law. Prior to joining the firm, Jill served as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable James B. Loken of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Jim Sticha focuses his practice on mergers and acquisitions, private and family business, and corporate finance. Jim represents a large number of private and family businesses on issues involving acquisition strategies, capital fund-raising, succession planning and other general corporate issues.
